Great Repeal Bill will retain environmental protections of EU law are retained in UK law at the point we leave the EU. Then parliament and devolved administrations can amend, repeal or improve.

A new environmental regulator and court to effectively monitor and enforce environmental law.
New statutory requirements for updates to Parliament on the state of nature and biodiversity.

“Our stewardship of the environment needs to be founded on sound principles and based on scientific assessments.”

Total ban on ivory trading.

“A Labour government will consult on establishing an environmental tribunal with simplified procedures to hear challenges to unlawful government decisions, like those made on the air quality strategy, without engaging in prohibitively expensive processes.”

Will require the UK government to seek endorsement of each UK country before any trade deal is signed, to protect Welsh farmers.

To ensure policies are implemented, the Liberal Democrats would: establish a Cabinet Committee on Sustainability, chaired by a cabinet minister; establish an Office for Environmental Responsibility to scrutinise the government’s efforts to meet its environment targets; and place a responsibility on every government agency to account for its contribution towards meeting climate targets in everything it does.
